VNSER HAFEN DEFENDER · CAERTHAN WARLORD

PREMIER BLADE

Ave! The Shire of Unser Hafen and the Barony of Caerthe proudly announce the VIth annual Unser Hafen Defender and Caerthan Warlord and Premier Blade Tourney.

The event will be held at the Roman camp at Windhover Cliff, the site of last Coronation, on September 16 and 17. This is a camping event. The site's well cannot handle large demands, so BRING YOUR WATER. Pets must be leashed at all times. There is road access to the list field, camping areas, and for emergencies, but cars must be parked in designated areas. The farmhouse is not for group use. Fire is allowed only in the fire pit. A 'no fire' rule may be in effect -- this may include cigarettes. SITE FEE $4.00.

Saturday there will be a heavy weapons prize list to choose the Unser Hafen Champion. The citizen of Unser Hafen who places highest in the list will be our Defender. Also on Saturday will be an open field melee to capture the opposing team's Eagle. On Sunday will be special Roman melees and gladiatorial games. From these fighting events, the noblest Caerthan will be selected as Caerthan Warlord.

A rapier list to choose the Premier Blade of Caerthe will be fought on Sunday. The Premier Blade will act as the Baroness's protector and must renounce all foreign alliances. A second and an exemplar will also be chosen. Anyone intending to enter this list must contact Mistress Keridwen of Gwenmarch, Baroness of Caerthe or Lord Bjarg before the event. A rapier list will also be held on Saturday.

A Roman style (reclining) banquet will be held Saturday night at the Grotto at the Sacred Heart of Jesus Catholic Church (site of the last Coronation feasts), 2312 14th Street in Boulder. The site is discretely wet. The Banquet is being prepared by Lady Aileen Bardon of Unser Hafen and will include five courses. On the table: breads, cheeses, sausage, fresh vegetables, olives. Course 1: Cold cucumber soup, pickled pheasant eggs, flat breads. Course 2: Chicken forcemeat, herbed rice, pickled beets. Course 3: Smoked fish, green beans Ezekiel, cauliflower vegetable mix with mint sauce. Course 4: Marinated beef, fried green onions, Solomon's cinnamon, cantaloupe. An oration competition and a dramatic presentation of the story of Persephone and "Demeter will be featured at the Banquet.

ANDBAGS

from The Medieval Penquin--Accessories for Milady by Alithea Ap Rhys of Birchum

Amonieres sarrasimoises, meaning "Saracen Almsbags", were introduced by the Crusaders. They were worn appended to their girdles and were supposed to be used to carry coins for the poor.

It was the custom for ladies of wealth to distribute either food or money to the needy, and the little amoniere, called aulmoniere, was a practical and attractive accessory. They were usually made of silk or leather and hung from the girdle by strings of unusual length.

Figure [1] is a 14th century bag designed to hold a book, usually, a book of prayer. The bag is of canvas and embroidered with silk and metal threads, executed in tent stitches. The face is divided into quadrangular fields, two showing animal forms--the stag and the unicorn, and the other two bird forms with human heads--one a jester, the other, a woman. The reverse side shows a tall central tree form with figures at each side.

From the late 12th to 16th centuries, many of the popular bags took on a flat shape, grew smaller, and were worn at the belt [as opposed to hanging by a long cord]. These were called pouches. These flat pouches were worn with a dagger thrust through the strap.

During the later Middle Ages, ladies spent much of their leisure time elaborately embroidering their shoes, gloves, girdles, and pouches. An example of fabrics and technique used on the pouch called the gypeciere, in the 13th century, is described as made of crimson velvet with figures and arabesque patterns which had first been embroidered with silk and Cypress gold thread; the reverse being a green, flowered damask. Many of these pouches were finished at the lower edge with knots and tassels of thread and metal, and others were hung with bells.

From the 14th to the 16th centuries, the pouches were made of velvets of all colors, gold, silver, and other threads for embroidery and some beadwork of pearls.

Handbags, having frames of bronze and gold, also came into fashion during this period.

Do you always have to wear that stupid hat?

What is his registered device?

FANTASY

by Nattira Morley

A silver ray of moonlight, shines upon the ground.
The bluish mist has lifted,
there is joy to all around,
unicorns are prancing
and fairy maids are dancing,
to music played by gnomes.
The forest is their playground
They dance among the trees an ride upon the butterflys that float on the breeze.

DAWN IN THE FOREST

by Nattira Morley

Raindrops fall
in droplets warm
from the sky.
They drift downward this morn.
Flower blossoms
sway in the breeze,
as raindrops filter
through the pine.
And squirrels scurry
in the mist,
and rainbows dance,
on rays of light
mixed with raindrops warm,
to signal the beginning
of each new day.
In the summer month of May
as clouds part for the sun.
You know the day has just begun
and the children will have their fun.
Running and playing in the grove
as sunshine filters
through the pine
in the forest at dawn.

the jacket potatoes again?"*

Moon Over the Ancient Castle

1. On the an - cient cas - tle tow'r Cold the moon - light falls.

Long a - go brave war - riors lived 'Neath these ru - ined walls.

Where are now those val - iant hearts? Where the ar - mor bright?

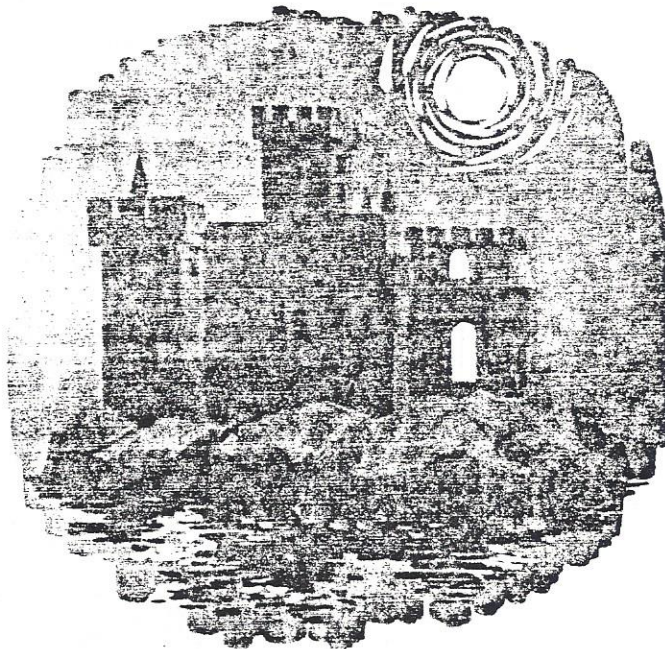

Si - lent - ly the cas - tle tands In the sil - ver light.

2. Through a soldier's rusted cup
Summer vines grow tall,
Autumn geese fly overhead,
Lonely floats their call;
Seasons die and time goes on,
Years pass all too soon;
Silently the castle stands
Underneath the moon.

3. Where is all the laughter now?
Where the harp's soft chord?
Rusted, the engraven shields,
Dulled, the shining sword.
Of them all one thing remains,
Empty, cold, and gray;
Still the ancient castle stands
In the moon's bright ray.

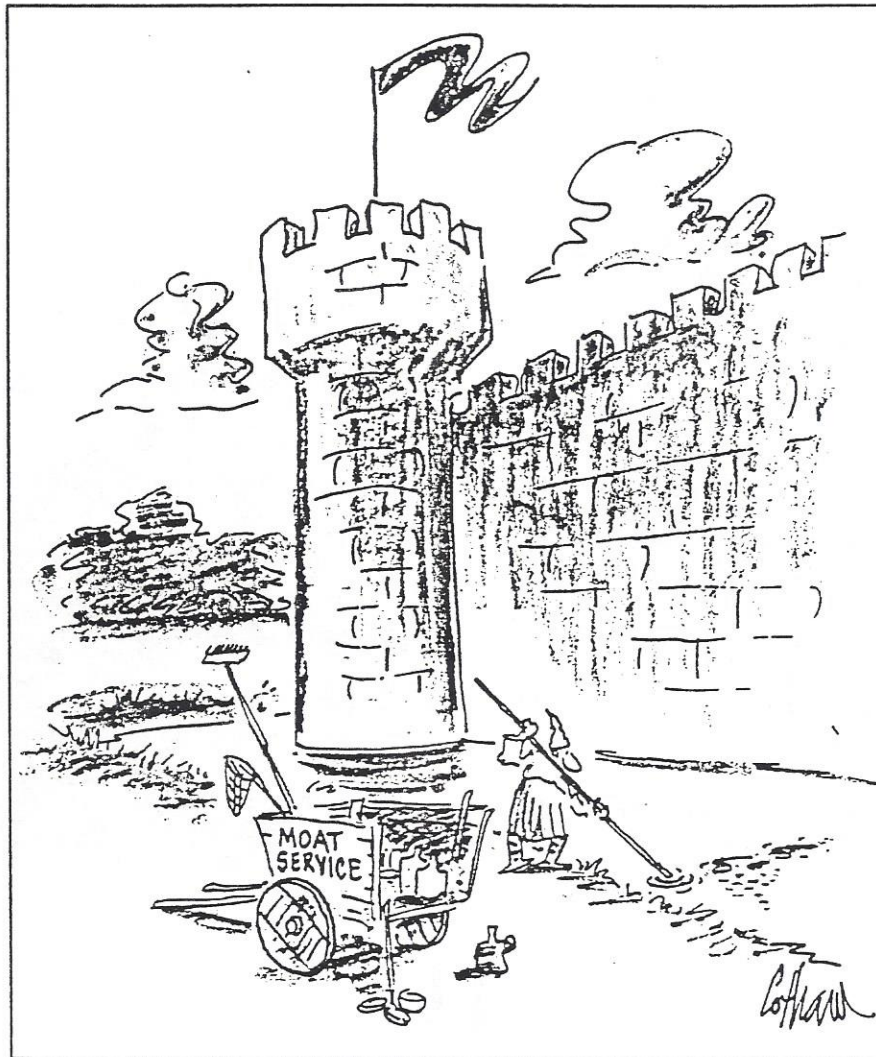

If you ever go to Europe you will probably see many ancient castles.

LADY ELAINE OF VALYNWOOD'S HERBAL HELPS

CARAWAY- (KARAWYA)

Known to be in use in England since 980 A.D. Brought back from Caria in the Near East. All the plant is useable. Seeds have been found in prehistoric dwellings in Switzerland. It was used by ancient Romans when on marches. Ancient Arabs called it Karawya. In the 17th century caraway seeds were baked in fruit, bread and cakes, and seperately as a relish.

MEDICAL USES: Use for flatus, and bruises. Aids in digestion, poultices and colic.

INFUSION: 2 teaspoons caraway to 1 pint boiling water

OIL DOSE: 1 to 10 drops

SEEDS DOSE: 1/3 to 1 teaspoon of the seeds

TEA: Add 2 crushed seeds to tea to aid in digestion

CAYENNE PEPPER

Used as a stimulant, digestive aid, sore throat, colds, and flu, bleeding and frostbite.

DIGESTIVE AID: Add 1 pinch to cooked, or raw foods; soup or tea

STIMULANT: Add a dash to grape juice for alertness

OINTMENT: Use to alleviate rheumatism. Use with glove when applying. Don't use on bleeding or open wounds

COLD FEET: Put a dash of powder inside socks with regular powder or cornstarch. CAUTION: Does stain socks

SORE THROAT: 1/8 teaspoon to cup boiling water or tea.

CHAMOMILE

Used as a sedative, good for stomache aches, teething, colic, digestion, weak stomach, stomach spams, diarrhea and nightmares

TEA: 1 to 2 tablespoons to one cup of tea. Drink at 1/2 cup at a time.

INSECT REPELLENT: Splash exposed areas with tea.

ANTISEPTIC PASTE: Add ground flowers to boiling water

INFUSION: For baths and hair, seep for 15 minutes, strain, and add to bath to heal body sores and aches.

CHIVES

Introduced into China about 300 B.C. Considered to heal bleeding and poison. Listed in 15th century cookbooks. Raised in herb gardens in Europe since the 16th Century.

CHERVIL

Native of southern Europe and was one of the principal herbs brought to England by the Romans. The Romans favored chervil vinegar for hiccups. Herbalists ascribe blood cleansing and digestive properties to the herb and have used it to increase perspiration during a cold and fevers and to lower blood pressure. Dried chervil leaves applied to bruises and painful joints ceases pain. Figures prominently in French foods, and many times used in combination with most of the other herbs. Cooking diminishes its flavor, so add it at the last minute to puddings, omelets, fish dishes, soups and sauces.

THE HISTORY OF THE CORONATION

The Setting

by Lady Renate Koven

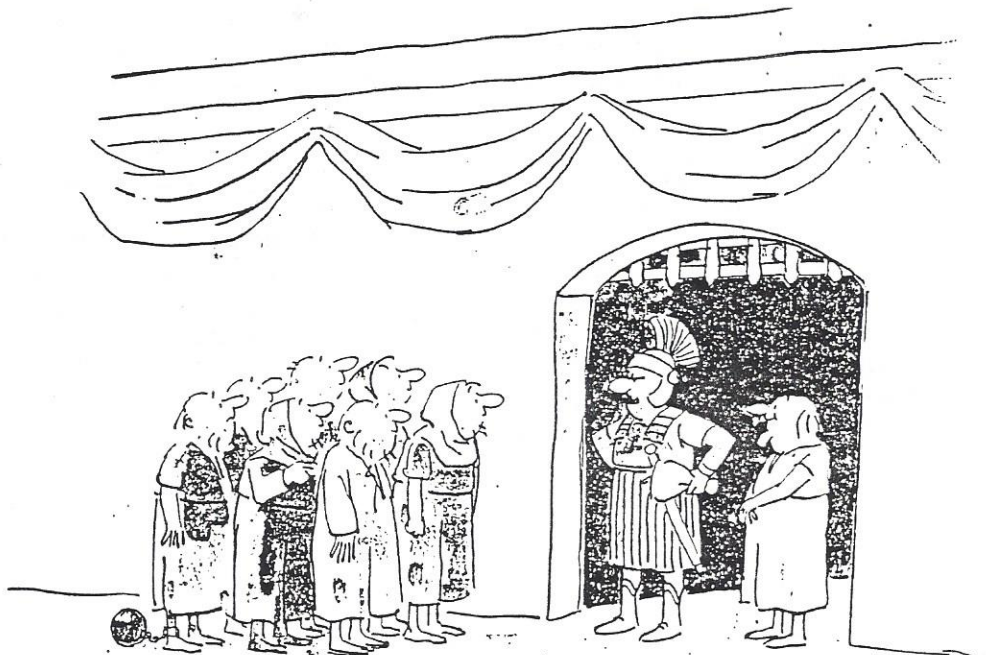

Westminster Abbey has become the setting for several Coronations. The largest part of the present Abbey was built under the direction of King Henry III in the middle of the 13th century (1245). Being a patron of the arts, he employed the finest craftsmen of the time.

The Abbey was built primarily for the use of some 80 monks, and not for a congregation. Normally, in medieval times, the general public was not admitted into the church except as pilgrims, and when they were following a definite route. The one exception was Westminster Abbey, where space had to be found for those who attended a great ceremony. The architect deliberately imported a feature of the Confessor's church and placed the choir west of the central crossing. This enabled the central space, between the choir, the sanctuary, and the high altar, to be used as a place where coronations could take place. This construction was completed in 1269.

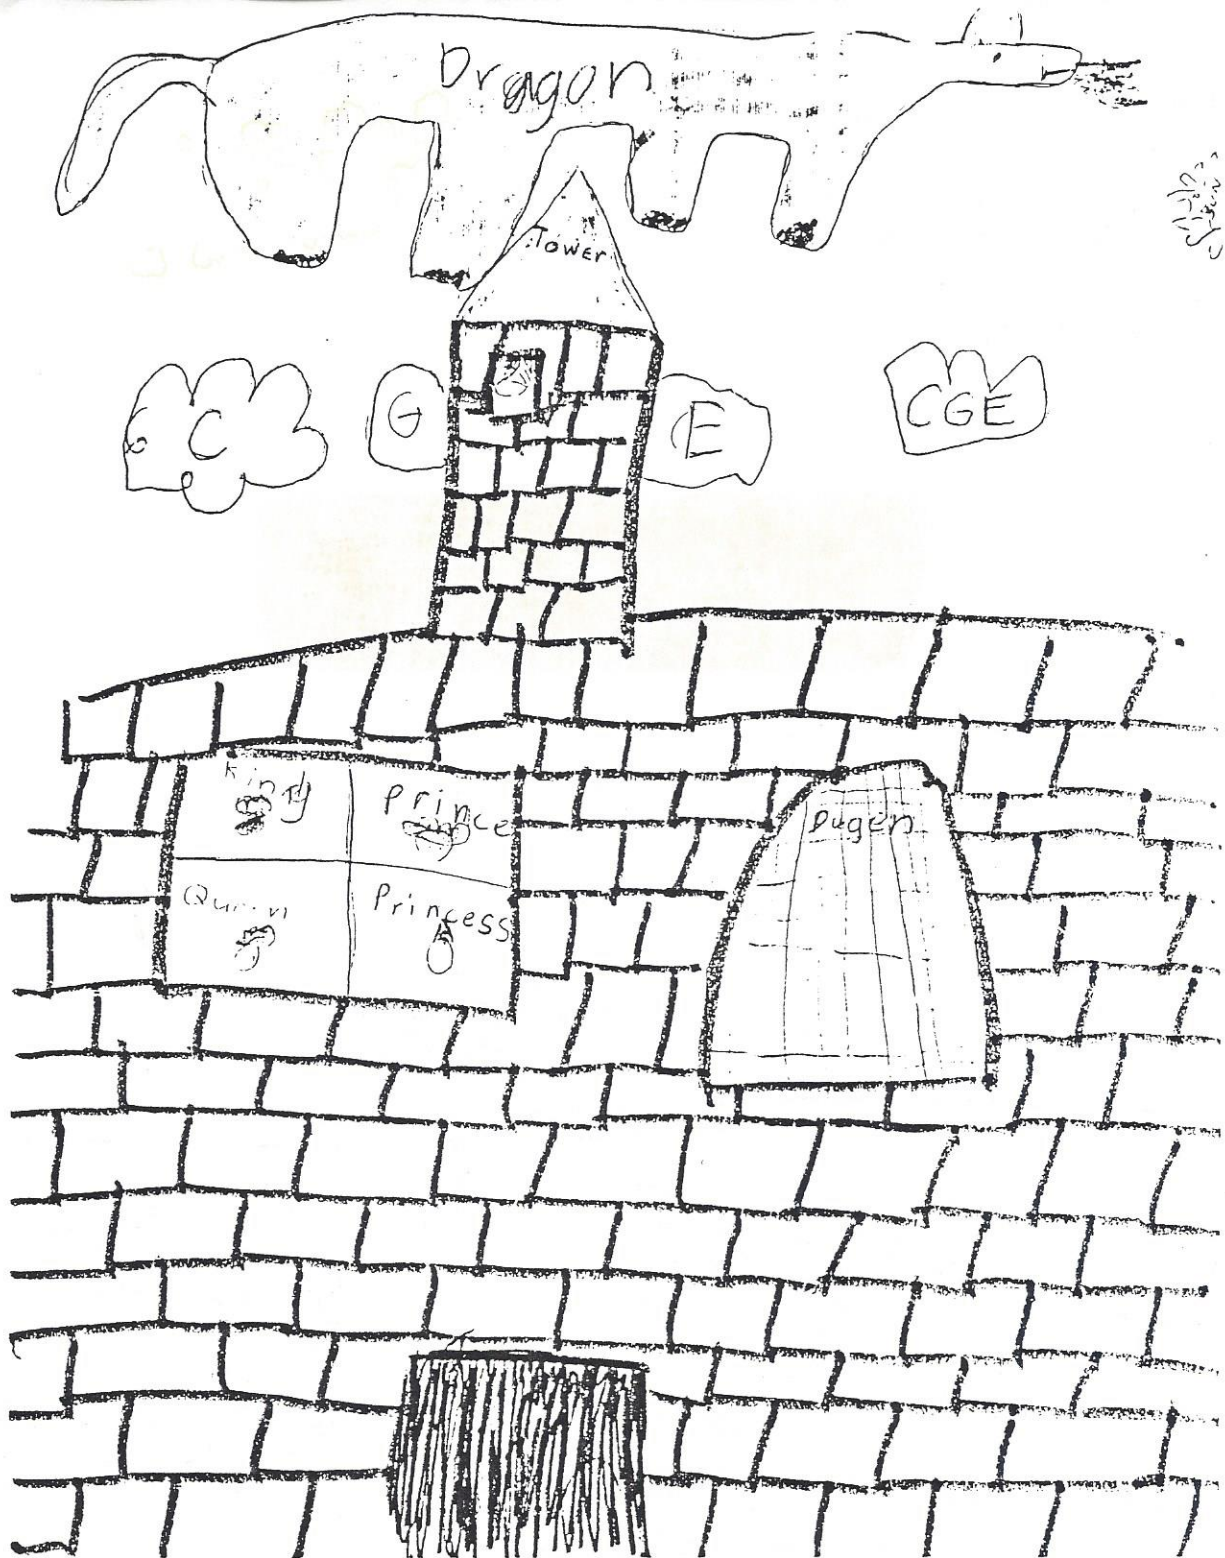

The Confessor's Nave was not changed until 1375. The new architect designed the nave to copy the earlier 13th century work, so it appears to have been built at the same time. The work was delayed, and was finally completed at the beginning of the 16th century.

Throughout medieval times successive Kings had taken a deep interest in Westminster Abbey's welfare. They have enriched the church with gifts, and endowed the monastery with lands.

The History of the Coronation by L.E. Tanner

"...Anybody else got a note?"

Once upon a time there was a beautiful princess. She was 13. She wanted to be a queen so badly. One day she saw a person. It happened to be a prince. When he got closer, she saw that it was a prince. She thought he was handsome. He thought she was beautiful. They loved each other. The prince asked the princess to marry him, and she said yes. So she became queen and he became king. And they lived happily ever after.
